

Killer Whale Clubs Tips

To some golfers, a club is a piece of sports equipment. Others see it as an extension of themselves. And then there are those who see a golf club as a weapon, and every game a battle.

If you're a battle-ready golfer waiting to take down your next opponent, you need to invest in killer equipment, like Killer Whale golf clubs.

When it comes to good quality clubs, like Killer Whale, Titleist, or Ping, a custom fit is the only way to go. After all, you've invested a lot of money in your clubs, so it only makes sense to have the perfect fit and performance. Even the most reserved golfer should secretly see these clubs as weapons, and be ready to battle the tees, the rough, the sand traps, the green and even the best of golfing buddies.

Since your clubs are so important to you, and so essential to your scorecard, it's important to customize them. Wilson creates customized Killer Whale golf clubs using a process it calls "dynamic fitting". Taking part in the process itself can give you an indication of just how much a custom fit can enhance your game.

The basis premise of dynamic fitting is simple. Every golfer has a different swing. From beginning hacks to players on the professional circuit, every individual golfer has his or her unique way that they shift their weight and swing their clubs. For this reason, clubs must be able to match your individual swing in order to really work for you. That's where Wilson's custom dynamic fitting system comes in. It allows you to choose custom Killer Whale golf clubs that can match your particular swing.

It's imperative that you are able to choose custom equipment, like Killer Whale golf clubs, that meet and enhance your natural swing. The process begins by choosing your head type to maximize the trajectory, forgiveness, and consistency of your swing. Then, choose the perfect shaft for your Killer Whale golf clubs.

It may sound too good to be true, but these simple steps can work wonders that no amount of practice and no number of training classes can match. Instructors might try to adjust your stance, and you could attempt to change your swing to compensate your equipment, but that just doesn't make sense. You don't have your body tailored to fit new clothes; instead, you buy clothes that feel comfortable on the body you already have. Remember this simple analogy and apply it when you're shopping for golf clubs.

For more information on dynamic fitting, Killer Whale golf clubs and the specific choices available to you, contact a local Wilson sales agent or visit your favorite golf equipment or pro shop. You can also check the Wilson golf website at wilson.com.